This program makes use of the built-in Windows keyboard macro system. By pressing a special set of keys, - at the beginning, a beep is heard for a short time, - at the end a beep is heard for a short time and the files will be encrypted. The beep pattern is triggered by a Windows 7/8/10 keyboard. The beep pattern is 'F1, F2, F3, F4, F5, F6, F7, F8, F9, F10, F11, F12'. Because of the limitations of the keyboard macros, you can use only certain keys of the keyboard as password. JavaFX Color Picker is an application which lets you pick a color from a list of predefined ones, open a picture, paste the color from the color picker into the picture, change the colors in the picture and save the result. You can change the colors and the picture's background in several ways: change the RGB values of the color, change the RGB values of the background, set it transparent, change the colors in a region, use patterns for color changing and opacity. Just choose one of the predefined colors from a list, choose one of the predefined backgrounds (new ones are added regularly) and a picture, paste the color or the background into the picture and the result is saved. Color Mania is a small application that contains a color selection screen, that you can use to select a color from a predefined list of colors, like the ones you can find in other color pickers. The application is very simple to use. Just select a color from the list or click on the list to browse through the colors. You can do it in a direct way, clicking on the list of colors (so, you don't have to use the slider) or using the slider to select a color. You can also use the mouse to select a color or you can choose a color by selecting a rectangle on the background of the screen. After the choice is made, the picture is saved. The color is also saved in the picture. To hide the color and see the original picture, press the 'X' button. "In 2009 I invited Franken to appear on [my show] 'Nightline' to discuss the then-upcoming vote on the healthcare reform bill," Dr. Leeann Tweeden wrote in a statement. "When I arrived at his home in nearby Scottsdale, Ariz., I was surprised to find Franken already present... "As we talked and took pictures together, he began to suggest that we both engage in a few giggly, wiggly, S&M-style shenanigans," she continued. "I laughed it off and told him I was a Democrat, not a Republican. He went on to say that he was a liberal Democrat. "After taking a photo of me in a blue dress lying on his bed with my hands behind my back, Franken began to grope me and ask me to re-create a'moose' call with my voice. When I continued to say no, he began to yell," Tweeden wrote. "I left his home immediately. We were not alone. Franken's full-grown son, Jimmy, came running after me as I was leaving." Tweeden said she reached out to Franken through a mutual friend, and he later apologized. Franken has not responded. "In my more than thirty years in the Senate, I have never engaged in such behavior and I feel terrible that Ms. Tweeden was pressured to engage in this now-infamous act," Franken said in a statement. "As I said last night, what Ms. Tweeden describes is wrong and unacceptable. I feel very badly about this and I am deeply sorry." Tweeden's accusations come on the heels of a New York Times report that comedian and actor Louis C.
